ADVERBS OF FREQUENCY

Frequency adverbs tell how often something happens.

Examples: often, never, always, sometimes, generally, usually, seldom, rarely, hardly, ever, frequently etc.

Position of Frequency Adverbs

Frequency adverbs can go in the following positions in a sentence:

1. Before the main verb

He never eats vegetables.
I often buy foreign periodicals.
They frequently visit us.
I always read commercial news.
They rarely watch sports channels.
I sometimes watch English films.

2. After the verb be

He is always late for office.
We are never invited to dinner parties.
I am always worried about my finances.
He is sometimes consulted by investors.
You are seldom anxious about my health.

3. Between the auxiliary/helping and the main verb or after the helping verb and before the main verb

He has always done justice to all.
I have often thought of starting a business.
I have never forgotten those unfortunate events.
I have sometimes managed to hoodwink others.
We could hardly ever appreciate his conduct.
We shall never seek such favors.
They will always regret having done this.
They will usually take such big risks.

4. Definite adverbs of frequency, also called adverbs of time like daily, weekly, monthly, every hour, once, twice a day etc. work best at the end of the sentence.

The newspaper is delivered daily.
They go to the cinema twice a week.
She stayed at her grandmother's house all day.
I submit a report to my boss monthly.

5. Some frequency adverbs (e.g., usually, normally, often, frequently, sometimes, and occasionally) can also go in the beginning or end of a sentence.

He writes often.

We visit them frequently.

Sometimes I am late for office.

6. The adverbs always, ever, never, seldom, and rarely need to be placed before the verb. These adverbs cannot be placed in the beginning or end of a sentence.

7. Adverbs usually go after the auxiliaries/helping verbs. But in evolved speech, when the auxiliaries need to be stressed, they are sometimes put after the adverbs. I sometimes am worried about my health.

I sometimes am worried about my health.

We never should do such things.

You always have done justice to all.

8. Used to and have to are always placed after adverbs.

We sometimes used to stay up the whole night.

He occasionally used to write to me.

The fire brigade always has to be ready to face any emergency.

ARTICLES

English has two types of articles: definite (the) and indefinite (a, an.)

1. Indefinite Articles: a and an

A and an signal that the noun modified is indefinite, referring to any member of a group. These indefinite articles are used with singular nouns when the noun is general; the corresponding indefinite quantity word some is used for plural general nouns. The rule is:

- a + singular noun beginning with a consonant: a boy
- an + singular noun beginning with a vowel: an elephant
- a + singular noun beginning with a consonant sound: a user (sounds like yoozer, i.e. begins with a consonant 'y' sound, so 'a' is used)
- some + plural noun: some girls

If the noun is modified by an adjective, the choice between a and an depends on the initial sound of the adjective that immediately follows the article:

- a broken egg
- an unusual problem
- a European country (sounds like yer-o-pi-an, i.e. begins with consonant 'y' sound)

Also note that in English, the indefinite articles are used to indicate membership in a profession, nation, or religion.

- I am a teacher
- Brian is an Irishman
- Seiko is a practicing Buddhist.

2. Definite Article: the

The definite article is used before singular and plural nouns when the noun is particular or specific. The signals that the noun is definite, that it refers to a particular member of a group. Compare the indefinite and definite articles in the following examples:

	Indefinite (a or an)	Definite (the)
Singular	a dog (any dog) an apple (any apple)	the dog (that specific dog) the apple (that specific apple)
Plural	some dogs (any dogs) some apples (any apples)	the dogs (those specific dogs) the apples (those specific apples)

The is not used with non-countable nouns referring to something in a general sense:

- [no article] Coffee is a popular drink.
- [no article] Japanese was his native language.
- [no article] Intelligence is difficult to quantify.

The is used with non-countable nouns that are made more specific by a limiting modifying phrase or clause:

- The coffee in my cup is too hot to drink
- The Japanese he speaks is often heard in the countryside.
- The intelligence of animals is variable but undeniable.

The is also used when a noun refers to something unique:

- the White House
- the theory of relativity
- the 1999 federal budget

Do not use the before:

- names of countries (Italy, Mexico, Bolivia) except the Netherlands and the US
- names of cities, towns, or states (Seoul, Manitoba, Miami)
- names of streets (Washington Blvd., Main St.)
- names of lakes and bays (Lake Titicaca, Lake Erie) except with a group of lakes like the Great Lakes
